- Holly and Hannes are in the kitchen, talking to their landlady via computer.
- They are interrupted by the sounds of Elizabeth's panpipe.
- Lily is amazed by this but Holly explains to her that Elizabeth is half Korean, half Bolivian and therefore learnt to play this instrument.
- Later on the balcony, Holly and Hannes talk about Nino who is never home anymore.
- Meanwhile, at work Elizabeth is asked where she gets all her beautiful clothes.
- She explains that she makes them herself, to which the sales representative replies that she should think about doing it professionally.
- When she gets home, the others are playing video games in the living room.
- Elizabeth is very excited and tells the others about the conversation she had with the sales representative.
- She asks them to help her start her own business.
- It is decided that Elizabeth and Holly will take care of the stock while Hannes and Nino are in charge of logistics.
- The next day, Hannes books a stall at a car boot sale online.
- Nino is still reluctant to talk about where he goes every night.
- Meanwhile, the girls find a lot of vintage 60s and 70s clothes at a charity shop.
- The next morning, the four of them load up the car and leave for the car boot sale.
- Although the weather is great, there aren't too many customers around.
- Luckily, Nino is good at talking up girls and convincing them to come over to look at Elizabeth's clothes.
- A young lady comes to the stall and says she likes Elizabeth's stuff.
- She doesn't buy anything but hands Elizabeth her card.
- When the four friends hear that the lady might offer Elizabeth a job, they are very happy.
